I'm hoping the right decision is made and future unlawful practices are deterred. But it appears that Microsoft has been able to side step their unlawful practices, in the past, and continue work as normal. They continue to try and control all computer operating systems and to deter any alternative systems. The proposed Educational solution was just another example of their controlling their destiny. This would have been no punishment for them. It was their way to dominate the Educational market, besides their continued domination of the business and home computer markets. (Also their continued efforts to control the internet.) I'm writing to let you know I appreciate you letting me express my opinions, on the matter, and hope all factors are taken in to consideration. I believe Microsoft has a choke hold on the computer world. If they are not made to let go of that grip, one day it may be to late and we will all pay dearly. Thank you again for your attention.
